ADVENT REFLECTION

Advent has always been, for me, like a gentle music accompanying my steps. It teaches me to move forward in life with accuracy, to contemplate it with clarity and trust. And, as we know, light has this admirable property: it dispels darkness, and with it disappear the fears, worries, and anxieties that it generates.

Another thought comes to me. You know music generally doesn't pursue any utilitarian purpose, and yet, it does so much good. It touches the heart, lifts it, opens it. It helps us enter a certain gratitude, an inner disposition that makes us capable, in daily life, of performing acts that are good, true, and beautiful.

Advent is precisely that: a time to pause, to reflect, to adjust the key to interpreting our life. It is the moment to bring all our relationships, all our thoughts, our entire being into harmony with God —that golden tuning fork made of love, trust, and light.
